In the heart of Portland, dining experiences at Balti Island have proven to be a mixed bag. While some patrons rave about the delicious vegetable balti and the attentive, friendly service, others have faced disappointing meals marked by bland flavors and inconsistencies in portion sizes. Complaints about unappetizing takeout, including watery curries and undercooked naan, alongside erratic pricing, have left a sour taste for some. Despite these issues, the restaurant stands out in an area with limited dining options, offering a welcoming atmosphere and local delivery.
