In Eastbourne, a restaurant's reputation teeters between disappointment and delight. Diners have experienced both poorly executed dishes—such as overcooked meat and underwhelming chips—and moments of culinary success, particularly with crispy chicken and generous kebab portions. While some customers lamented price hikes and service delays, others praised the improved quality of food and friendly staff. The establishment seems to be on a path of revitalization, winning back former patrons with flavorful offerings and ample portions. Overall, the dining experience remains inconsistent, leaving diners divided on whether to return or explore alternatives.
